

Whereas: The American People were created exceptional by virtue of being the Only People to defined by shared, and therefore, shareable, Principles, Customs, History, and Cultures, traced back through the issues of humanity's greatest minds, unlike Old World Peoples who are defined by an exclusionary bloodline traced through the issue from the loins of unknown ancestors,

And Whereas: The American People are Many forged into One by the fiery crucible of it's Melting Pot, like the metallurgists fiery melting pot forges base metals into ever better alloys. Alloys in which the best of its' base metals are still visible, but from which their worst has been expelled as slag. Alloys that are One thing that no stress will ever again shatter into the base metals from which it was forged. The opposite of the Old World's Mosaic that consists of little color-coded tiles stuck together with brittle grout, and has history has shown are shattered into waring factions whenever seriously stressed.

And Whereas: Almost no living Americans have experienced as much of humanity's most horrible evils, or been asked to sacrifice as much, or otherwise contributed as much, as those who trod the millenniums-long trail it took to drag humanity out of the pre-America, world that was ruled forever by many, equally evil, variations of feudal systems that are so eloquently described by the contents of any museum dedicated to torture instruments invented by humans along that path.

And Whereas:: The enormity of all that made up that path to America, makes it impossible to present, preserve, communicate, and comprehend it all as an infinite, and ever growing list of what constitutes America and The America and The American people,

And Whereas: The only way to deal with It's enormity is to have a single focal point to which all of the separate sacrifice, suffering, herculean effort, learning, teaching, philosophy, history, and the myriad other things that define America, may point, and that together comprise it's never ending evolution from creation by its Founders out of whole cloth as the worlds "Great Experiment".

And Whereas: Part of that which defines The American People is a shared commitment to Common Courtesy, and Respect, and Gratitude, for the sacrifices of those who gave us America, all of which need a single focal point as a reference to which all Americans can look.

Now Therefore Be it Moved: That whenever Republicans hold a meeting, of which the Pledge of Allegiance to the American Flag is part, we will call upon those who feel no need to renew there pledge to fellow Americans that we stand united to preserve, protect, and honor the enormity of American whose focal point is the American Flag, to graciously leave the meeting while the pledge is made, instead of using their refusal as a private statement of superior principles, and virtues.